First Holy Communion 2021

I do not foresee us this year being able to offer anything like a normal programme of preparation. Having consulted our parish catechists, this is what I believe to be possible.

- If parents of children born before September 2013 are willing to prepare their child at home using the resources we recommend, they are welcome to do so, and we will support the parents as best we can.
- At the end of the preparation, we will arrange First Holy Communion for the children in twos and threes, as we did in 2020.
- For First Confession, whether we can have a group liturgy like we did in 2020 will rather depend on the number of children preparing, and the timing. Let's wait and see on this, rather than decide in advance.

If your child is eligible and you're willing to prepare them for the Sacraments, please let me know by the evening of Sunday 17 February. Fr Geoffrey.

Closing our churches

Please continue to pray for everyone involved in helping to roll-out the vaccine, so that we'll be able to open again for public worship in safety and with confidence. In the meantime, let's all of us play our part in keeping ourselves and others safe. God bless, Fr Geoffrey.

Folk for whom we are praying

Everyone, please take a look through the list of names in our newsletter of people who are ill or infirm. Sometimes names remain on the list of people who are now well recovered, or who were added by someone outwith the parish with whom we no longer have contact.

If you have requested that someone be included, please confirm that you'd still like them to remain on our list, and confirm that they have given their permission. E-mail the parish office, or phone and leave a message. Thank you, Fr Geoffrey.

Musings from my hermitage

The heart of Mark's Gospel is the person of Jesus. In this Sunday's episode Jesus entered the synagogue and taught. He made "a deep impression on [people] because, unlike the scribes, [Jesus] taught with authority".

Imagine what the first disciples made of this. They're learning that Jesus and his teachings have power to overcome 'unclean spirits'. Jesus is not just another prophet; Jesus is the Prophet, the One, promised by Moses.

Like the Hebrew slaves on their journey into freedom, we can sometimes feel overwhelmed by negative, divisive forces. Just as 'unclean spirits' disturbed the worship of the synagogue, so too can they invade our worship, our personal prayer. The things that drain us and drag us down are not easily put aside. We want to lead a good life; so easily we settle for compromise. The spirit of our baptism inspires us to serve — our family, the church, our local community; but other spirits prompt selfishness and isolation. We believe in goodness, that God has made us stewards of creation; but waste and excess are commonplace. We know that Jesus sought always to include people, draw them close; but so many attitudes separate and divide folk.

There are many voices like the 'unclean spirits' who tried to disrupt the prayer of the synagogue and shout down Jesus; and some of those voices might be in our own heart.

But the gospel according to Mark shows the power of Jesus' teaching, the authority of his words. The words of Jesus make change. When Jesus spoke, evil withdrew. What Jesus said happened for those who listened. Why would that not also be true in our own day?
